

COVID-19 Jab is Cause of Death in 30-40% of Autopsies of Recently Vaccinated, Says German Chief Pathologist

German Chief Pathologist Peter Schirmacher has recently announced that 30 to 40 percent of people he examined not long ago were found to have died from COVID-19 vaccine-related issues.

Schirmacher, the director of the Pathological Institute of the University of Heidelberg, reported that in the forty autopsies he recently conducted, the most common denominator among them was that they died within two weeks of receiving a dose of COVID-19 vaccine.

Apart from stressing that the vaccine seemed to have spurred the development of autoimmune diseases as a side effect, the Chief Pathologist also discovered that it also caused cerebral vein thrombosis in some of the deceased persons he examined. However, he did not specify whether the deceased individuals only had their first shot or were already administered a total of two doses.

Based on the results of his investigation, Schirmacher is calling for more frequent and more thorough autopsies of vaccinated individuals to determine if the COVID-19 shots played a role in their demise. The Chief Pathologist emphasized that he is publicizing his findings because there may already be many unreported cases of deaths resulting from the COVID-19 vaccine.

Schirmacher's findings have been brushed off by the Paul-Ehrlich-Institut, the German federal medical regulatory body and research institution for vaccines and biomedicines, as "incomprehensible." When asked about his opinion about Schirmacher's claims, senior German immunologist Thomas Mertens related that he does not "know of any data that would allow a justifiable statement to be made here."

Erlangen University Hospital's Christian Bogdan, an immunologist and a member of the Standing Vaccination Commission (STIKO), refuted Schirmacher's report and declared the "high number of unreported vaccination complications or even deaths" reported by the latter as unfounded.

While Schirmacher is bombarded with condemnation and ridicule by most of his peers in the medical field, the Chief Pathologist found an ally with the Federal Association of German Pathologists. The said association supported the move to conduct autopsies of vaccinated individuals to ascertain if it does have a link to their deaths.

Schirmacher clarified that his intention in publicizing his findings is not related to spreading unnecessary fear or anxiety. The Chief Pathologist also wants to emphasize that he is not against the COVID-19 vaccine because he's already had a dose himself. Instead, his main objective in getting all of this out in the open is to assess the issue competently.

Remarkably, should Schirmacher's findings receive the regard and attention they deserve, it could spell out disaster to big pharmaceutical companies. They are set to lose billions of dollars worth of long-term business in COVID-19 vaccines, booster shots, and other drugs purportedly created to combat the pandemic.
